

Marsh-Die Off: Salt Marsh and crab populations: interspecies interactions

Some salt marsh sites within the Reserve, have been selected to study aspects of the “Marsh die-off” problem affecting many New England marshes as well other salt marsh systems world-wide. The current study, by Brown University researchers Mark Bertness and Altieri is using plots within WBNERR as a control area since it is one of the least impacted marshes on the Cape.